Parenting can be filled with grief & sadness, especially when parenting children who are troubled or have special needs or were adopted. Parents living with their child's challenging behaviors, mental health issues, physical disabilities, and more, often feel forgotten, ignored, unseen. "Tears of Despair" speaks directly to parents that are struggling with their kids and teenagers. No matter what kind of grief & despair parents might be going through, tears is part of the healing process. This book presents words of sorrow from famous poets, the Bible, and the mom of a short-term special needs child. These lamentations and poems speak about the sorrows and challenges of parenting children with diagnoses of reactive attachment disorder (RAD), bipolar, post traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), depression, autism, as well as many adoptive and foster families. While this book is written for parents, family therapists and counselors will find this beneficial to share with their clients.
